It's Alive!!

The building block of everything is the atom and when the atom is reduced to its smallest particle it will still look like an atom except that it will have a different name. The Higgs Boson (The 'God' particle) is currently the smallest of the small. In a linear world the smallest particle is the stuff of everything and it is believed that when we isolate and control this ultimate particle we will become masters of the universe. But, what we do not realize is that the ultimate particle is alive with its own hierarchy; a trinity of contention that is the driving force of all that is produced from it. The dual aspect of the particle is unaware of the third party that drives its experience and so there is reason to be conCERNed as we continue to bombard the particle in our attempt to control the universe.
